FrontLine Compliance President to Present on Key Regulatory Challenges at NAVA Conference

Former SEC and FINRA regulator to moderate roundtable and address audience of insurance compliance executives

ALEXANDRIA, VA (PRWEB) June 3, 2009 – Amy Lynch, president and founder of FrontLine Compliance, LLC will provide timely and valuable insight to her audience at the upcoming NAVA Government & Regulatory Affairs Conference on June 7-9, 2009 at the Renaissance Mayflower Hotel in Washington, DC. Lynch, a former SEC and FINRA regulator, will be a featured speaker and moderator on the critical challenges and risks facing chief compliance officers in the current regulatory environment.

Lynch will participate in two roundtable sessions during the conference and help lead crucial dialogue for chief compliance officers dealing with unprecedented circumstances. “The insurance industry is facing increasing regulatory demands during a time of market turbulence and lower sales. Many chief compliance officers must now meet their objectives with smaller budgets and less compliance staff,” comments Lynch, also a former director of compliance and chief compliance officer. “My speaking sessions will offer attendees a chance to share ideas with colleagues, learn how to mitigate the increasing compliance risks they face each day, and find creative and meaningful ways to keep up with their compliance responsibilities.”

Selected as a speaker for her industry and regulatory experience, Lynch will draw on her vast experience with variable insurance product compliance matters. She has been recognized as an expert on a number of high profile regulatory issues and previously supervised and coordinated programs for the SEC, FINRA, and other regulatory agency staff.
